This series on Emigration from the United Kingdom to America concentrates on U.K. emigration in the period 1870-1897, listing migrants from the U.K. who arrived in New York. The original passenger lists transcribed by shipping agents and ship's officers and filed by all vessels entering U.S ports have been used in the preparation of Emigration from the United Kingdom to America. Presented in chronological order by each ship's date of arrival, these passenger lists provide the names of ships, ports of departure, and arrival and debarkation dates. The researcher can also locate data regarding a person's age, sex, and occupation, as well as village of origin and destination when reported.

The 1988 Fisheries Bioengineering Symposium, held in Portland, Oregon, USA, was based on a theme of "Problems and Solutions in Developed River Systems." The emphasis was upon developed river systems both because development is more the norm than nondevelopment and because the seemingly worst problems-hence, the biggest challenges-for fish in rivers result from development. Further, one can reasonably predict that development will continue, so unless adequate solutions are found, river-based fisheries will experience progressively greater problems. Most of the symposium was devoted to solutions in two main and widely divergent topics: habitat improvement and restoration, and mitigation via hatcheries. Although these topics may seem strange bedfellows, they define the main alternatives available to fishery managers for correcting or mitigating fishery losses in developed rivers, and they are the professional concerns of bioengineering. In this regard, it was a primary goal of the steering committee to bring together and facilitate information exchange between biologist and engineers so that each group could gain a better appreciation for the other's perspectives, constraints, and strengths.

The whole problem of our time is the problem of love. How are we going to recover the ability to love ourselves and to love one another? We cannot be at peace with others because we are not at peace with ourselves, and we cannot be at peace with ourselves because we are not at peace with God. There is a distinction between a contrite sense of sin and a feeling of guilt. The former is a true and healthy thing, the latter tends to be false and pathological. The man who suffers from a sense of guilt does not want to feel guilty, but at the same time he does not want to be innocent. He wants to do what he thinks he must not do, without the pain of worrying about the consequences. The history of our time has been made by dictators whose characters, often transparently easy to read, have been full of repressed guilt. They have managed to enlist the support of masses of men moved by the same repressed drives as themselves. Modern dictatorships display everywhere a deliberate and calculated hatred for human nature as such. The technique of degradation used in concentration camps and in staged trials are all too familiar in our time. They have one purpose: to defile the human person.
